RANGE FOR PRACTICE WILL BE INCREASED

Naval Gunners This Year Must Shoot at 12,000 and 15,000 Yards.

Advanced battle target practice by the Atlantic fleet of battleships will begin off the Virginia capes tomorrow morning. Very accurate firing was done by the Atlantic fleet battleships last fall at a range of 10,000 to 14,000 yards.

This year the range will be increased to 12,000 and 15,000 yards. It would be still further increased were it not for the danger involved in case of accidental stray shots. In this practice there are four targets, each stretched upon a raft. They are fastened together 240 yards apart, the regulation battle steaming distance between ships, and the towing ship is but 600 yards ahead of the first target.

Farthest Practice Distance.

The towing ship cannot well be farther moved because of the difficulty in handling the rafts and the danger of tow-line breaking.

An innovation, mapped out by Lieut. Commander Leigh Palmer, director of target practice, will be an attack upon the fleet by a flotilla of airplanes. These will consist of a number of balloons and a few small model aeroplanes. Some of the balloons will be held captive as targets, while others will be freed in the wind at sea to determine the reliability of the three and five inch machine guns for bringing them down. The aeroplanes will be suspended below the balloons. These will consist of models or dummy aeroplanes, about the size of the Wright army machine.

Aeroplanes as Targets.

They will be suspended several hundred feet below the balloons, in order that they may stand out alone as a target without risk of bringing it down into the sea before it is hit, by striking the gas bag, which doubtless will be the easier target.

Secretary Meyer, who witnessed the bombardment of the San Marcos, will observe the practice next week. He has invited the members of both congressional tance between ships, and the towing ship is but 600 yards ahead of the first target.

naval committees to be his guests on the trip. He will leave Washington this afternoon on the Mayflower, with as many guests aboard as can be accommodated. The remainder of the party will go on the Dolphin. It is expected that the party will be in the city on Friday, and will remain until Thursday or Friday.

FUTURE BRITISH KING LIKED BY INTIMATES

Young Prince of Wales Regarded as Cold by Those Without Confidence.

Special Cablegram to The Star.

LONDON, April 1.—Although the Prince of Wales, who has just left the royal naval college at Dartmouth, is not yet seventeen years old, he has been inundated with appeals from various charitable societies and society women who are anxious to secure his presence at charitable functions. King George has, however, put his foot down very firmly on this sort of thing, and has allowed it to be known that on no account will he allow the young prince to participate in any public ceremony, with the exception, of course, of investiture in Wales, until he attains the age of eighteen in July of next year.

The king, however, relaxed his rule when the prince made his first public speech at a quasi ceremony at Dartmouth, when, as Duke of Cornwall, he presented a silver cup to the mayor as an outward sign of power invested in the town as bailiff and guardian of Dartmouth waters during his stay at Newquay, recuperating with his brother Albert after the measles.

The prince enjoyed himself immensely, but Albert proved himself more popular with the townsfolk. The Prince of Wales is still somewhat shy and reserved, seeming to feel already his responsibility as heir to the throne. Those who met him regard his manner as cold and formal, but the cadets at Dartmouth College know very different. He was subjected to as much good-natured ragging as any other cadet, and the prince proved himself as a fighter in a fair fistfight with a worthy opponent. Prince Albert, who is a very jolly boy, has returned to Dartmouth, where he is known as "Bertie, the Washman."

An automobile ran into a culvert near Harrisonburg, Va., turning over and injuring both occupants. J. W. Thompson, postmaster of Dayton, was knocked unconscious and badly bruised. William Evers of Dayton suffered similar injuries, losing also a tooth and part of an ear.

WORK OF AMERICANS IN PARIS ART WORLD

Walter Winans, All Around Sportsman, to Show Statue of Sitting Bull.

Special Cablegram to The Star.

PARIS, April 1.—Among the oddities of this year's salon will be a statue of Sitting Bull by Walter Winans of Baltimore and London. Winans is a well known horseman, shot, huntsman and all-around sportsman. He organized a drag hunt in Normandy last year; now he surprises his friends by breaking into art.

He shows the bloodthirsty old chief of the Dakotas mounted on an Indian pony. The statue material is very costly, being a mixture of bronze and silver. Critics declare it to be daring.

Walter Winans of Baltimore, Augustus Eddy of Chicago and Ames Van Wart of

New York are three amateur American artists represented in this year's salon. Van Wart, who is a grand nephew of Washington Irving, has sculptured a "God Pan."

Fallieres to Be Absent.

The works of the sculptors Winans and Van Wart will be shown in the National Society of Fine Arts, which opens Good Friday, April 14, while Painter Eddy will send his to the Society of French Artists for the old salon, whose opening day will be April 20.

Regret is felt because a trip to Algeria will prevent President Fallieres from doing the salon honors this year.

Mrs. Whitney Hoff, wife of John Jacob Hoff, the Standard Oil magnate, and daughter of the late Commodore Whitney of Detroit, has bought a beautiful nude picture from Mlle. Jean Troupet for her American museums in the smaller American towns, such as exist in the provincial towns of France.

May Be Too Parisian.

She has begun at Crawfordsville, Ind., and her plan is to make an annual gift to her infant museum. This year the nude work of art is comprised in her gift. It is called "Femme a la Toilette." While admiring the artistic taste of Mrs. Hoff, critics say the picture may be too Parisian for the people of a western town. It is noteworthy that the wives of the Standard Oil representatives at Paris and London, Mrs. John Jacob Hoff and Mrs. James McDonald, are both great patronesses of art.

ANACOSTIA.

Rev. George F. Dudley, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Washington, preached the sermon in Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Anacostia, Friday evening at a special service. An offertory was rendered by the choir under the direction of William Scantlebury, Jr.

The boys' senior class of the Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church discussed plans for public gatherings to be held in the church on Minnesota avenue in the near future at a meeting held the past week at the residence of George Maier, the president.

Rev. Joseph Snider, a missionary priest of the Roman Catholic Church, has returned to his headquarters at Saratoga, N. Y., after spending several days as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Epiphany S. Hower in Anacostia. Father Snider conducted the mission services in the local church recently.

The monthly communion service will be celebrated today in the Anacostia Baptist Church, with the Rev. Frank L. Barden in charge. Preparatory services were held Friday evening.

The Washington Railway and Electric

Company within the next few days will begin laying double tracks to Congress Heights. The ground has been laid off and material ordered for the work. It will be necessary to erect a "booster" station in the rear of the present waiting station, in order that the voltage may be kept uniform.

Word has been received here of the purchase by a real estate firm of the Christie estate. It is the purpose of the promoters to subdivide the property and place it on the market. When this is done it will greatly enlarge the residence section of Anacostia.

The junior confirmation class of the Anacostia Emmanuel Episcopal Church held a meeting yesterday morning in the choir room of the church, when Rev. W. G. Davenport delivered a lecture.

Burial of Sir Caspar Furdon Clarke.

LONDON, April 1.—The body of Sir Caspar Furdon Clarke, former director of the South Kensington Museum of London and of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, who died Wednesday, was buried in Kensal Green cemetery today. Many friends and coworkers in the world of art were present at the services. American Ambassador Whitelaw Reid on behalf of friends of Sir Caspar in the United States sent a tribute of laurels and lilies.
